Earlier on this year we took our teenagers out to see a show based on the life of Daniel, it was an awesome experience for the children and their teachers too. All the children were thrilled, one that sat beside me during the show said "we should do this more often, this is better than sitting down and just listening to a story. I will not forget this in a hurry". For me the show was very educative in that it helped to put in perspective for the children and myself the tremendous pressure on the Hebrew brothers and how they endured and overcame the challenges.

It is also a faith builder, in the sense that one can claim the truth that God does not change and He is no respecter of persons, if He was faithful to the Hebrew brothers by honoring their faith He will honor ours too if we can just believe. Those are some of the fall in from our trip. It is indeed a show me world besides research have shown that people recall more of what they see than what they heard so as we teach our children the word of God let us incorporate a lot of visuals, pictures they say in worth more than ten thousand words.

This takes me to our role as models, in 1Pet. 2:21-22; we see there that Christ left us as example- that we should follow His steps – who committed no sin nor deceit found in His mouth, on our own path let us shun sin and let no deceit be found in our mouth – the children are watching and "recording" our actions, it is my prayers that what they see will be good memories that will have positive impact on them. Let us take heed to our ministry as models, let's be an example in word, in conduct, in love, in spirit, in faith, in purity – let's give attention to reading and exhortation, to doctrine – 1Tim. 4:12-13 (in one of the previous articles we were encouraged to equip ourselves – very important point). Let us always remind ourselves that we are the Jesus Christ the children are seeing so as we equip ourselves let us also walk in the light of the knowledge remember you teach what you learn but you produce who you are. It is my prayer that we will not fail the one that has left us as examples in Jesus' name. Amen.
